dedication

High School is a time to live, to laugh and to learn. James Rude has helped us to learn how to live and how to laugh. Through Christ, through Cam and through himself he has given much to us.

This El Camino is dedicated to Christian James Rude S.J.

J.D. Hokoyama

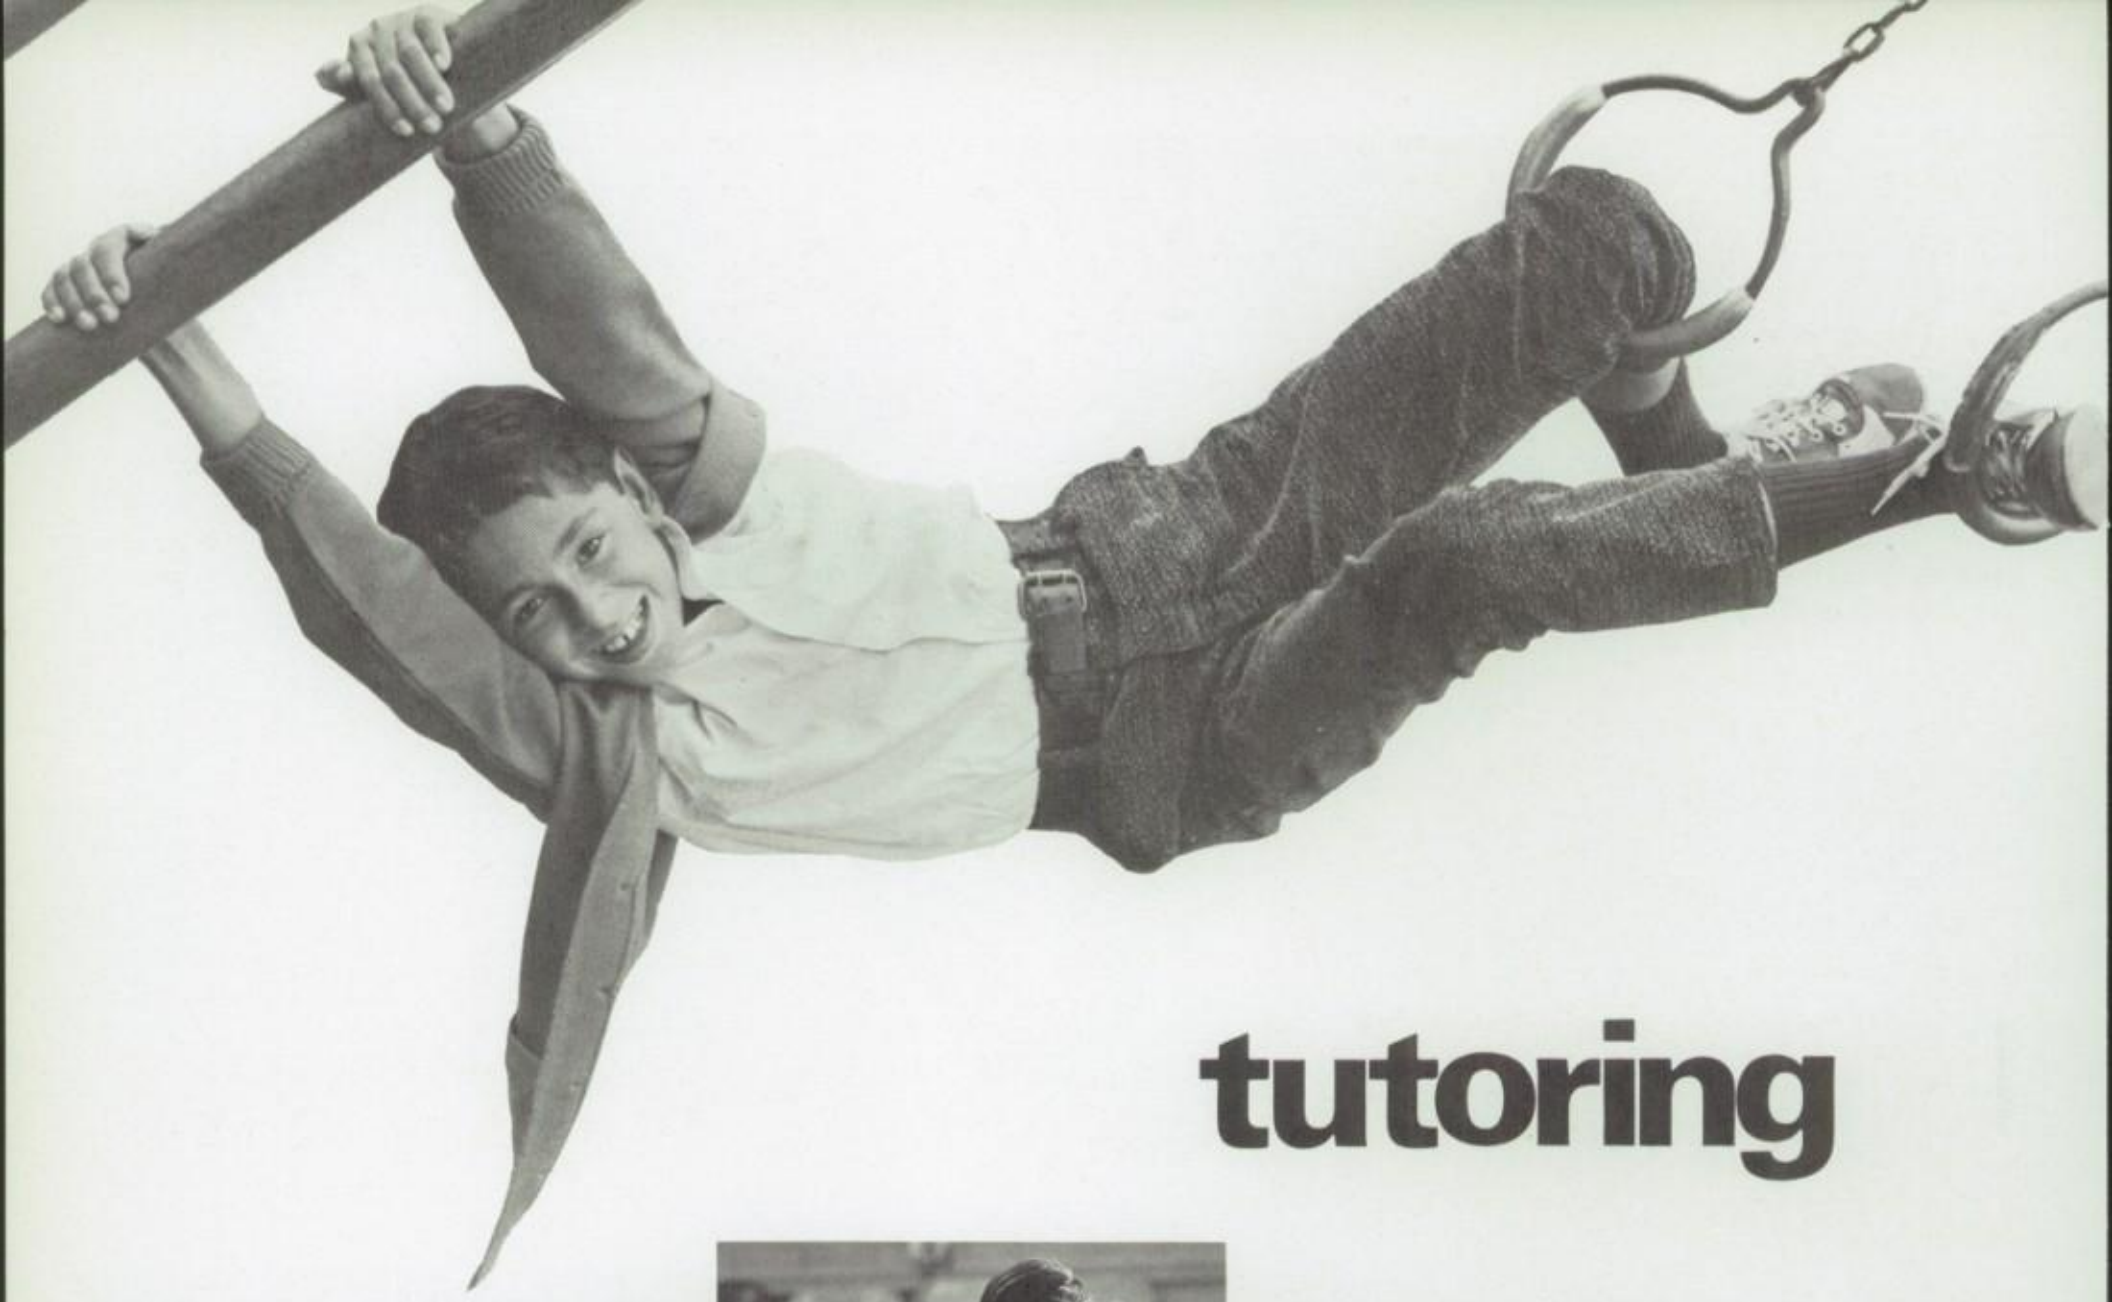
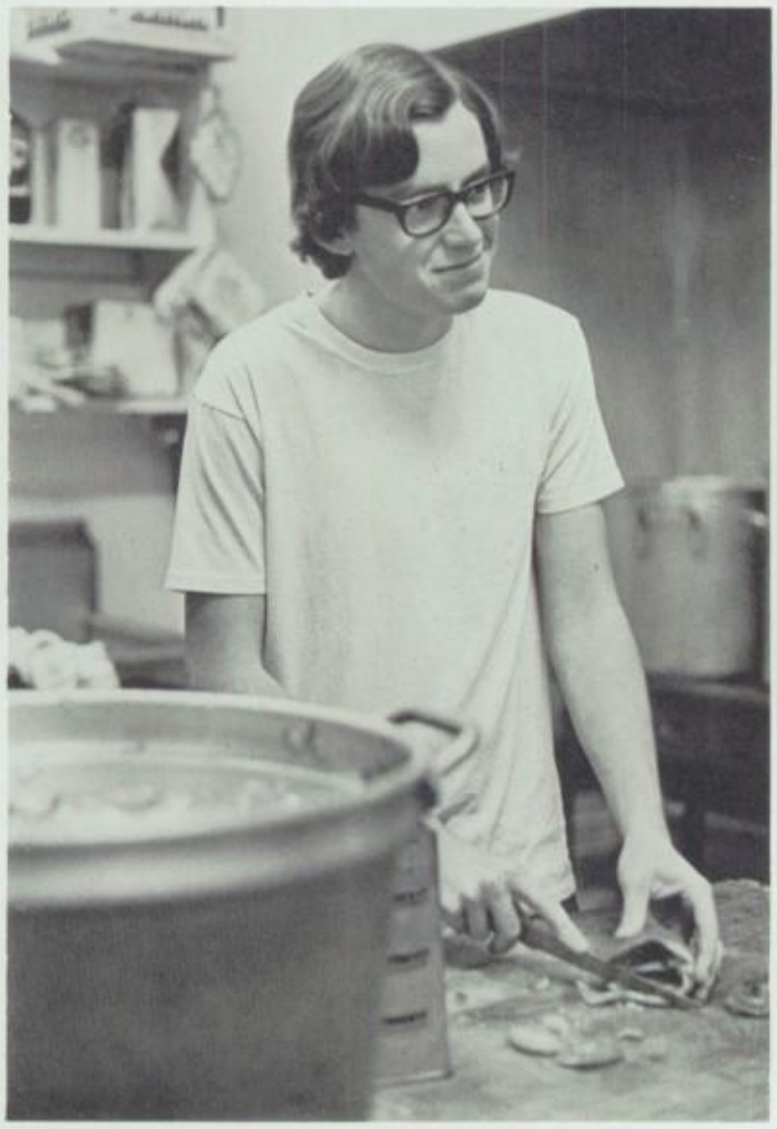
CAM- The new spirit at Loyola is evidenced by the Christian Action Movement. Moderated by Fr. James Rude and Mr. John Hokoyama, CAM is dedicated to involving Loyola with the surrounding community and developing the Christian spirit at Loyola.



tutoring

Every day during third period Fr. Rude's Urban Problems class tutors the St. Thomas Grade School children in Math and English. This year, as in the past few years, a few students once a week substitute this kind of actual community service for their regular Theology class.



soup kitchen

CAM's helping hand lengthened its reach this year to include the House of Hospitality, better known to Loyola students as the Soup Kitchen. During the weekend a crew gathers to prepare food for those who need it. The job entails sweeping, scrubbing, washing, heating, stirring, dishing, talking, caring, sharing and feeling.

jail run

Another weekend activity is CAM's Jail Run. Students set up a coffee and donut truck outside L.A.'s county jail for those who have terminated their sentence. The bolstered spirits and sincere thanks of the men give Loyola students a sense of accomplishment.

The game of football is said to be much like life itself. We have learned, from this season, that life is not always sweet with victory. Because of this, we have also learned that we are a team, and that is reason enough to have pride in ourselves. For it is pride that makes something worth doing, and it is this knowledge that makes us better men today for what we have done.

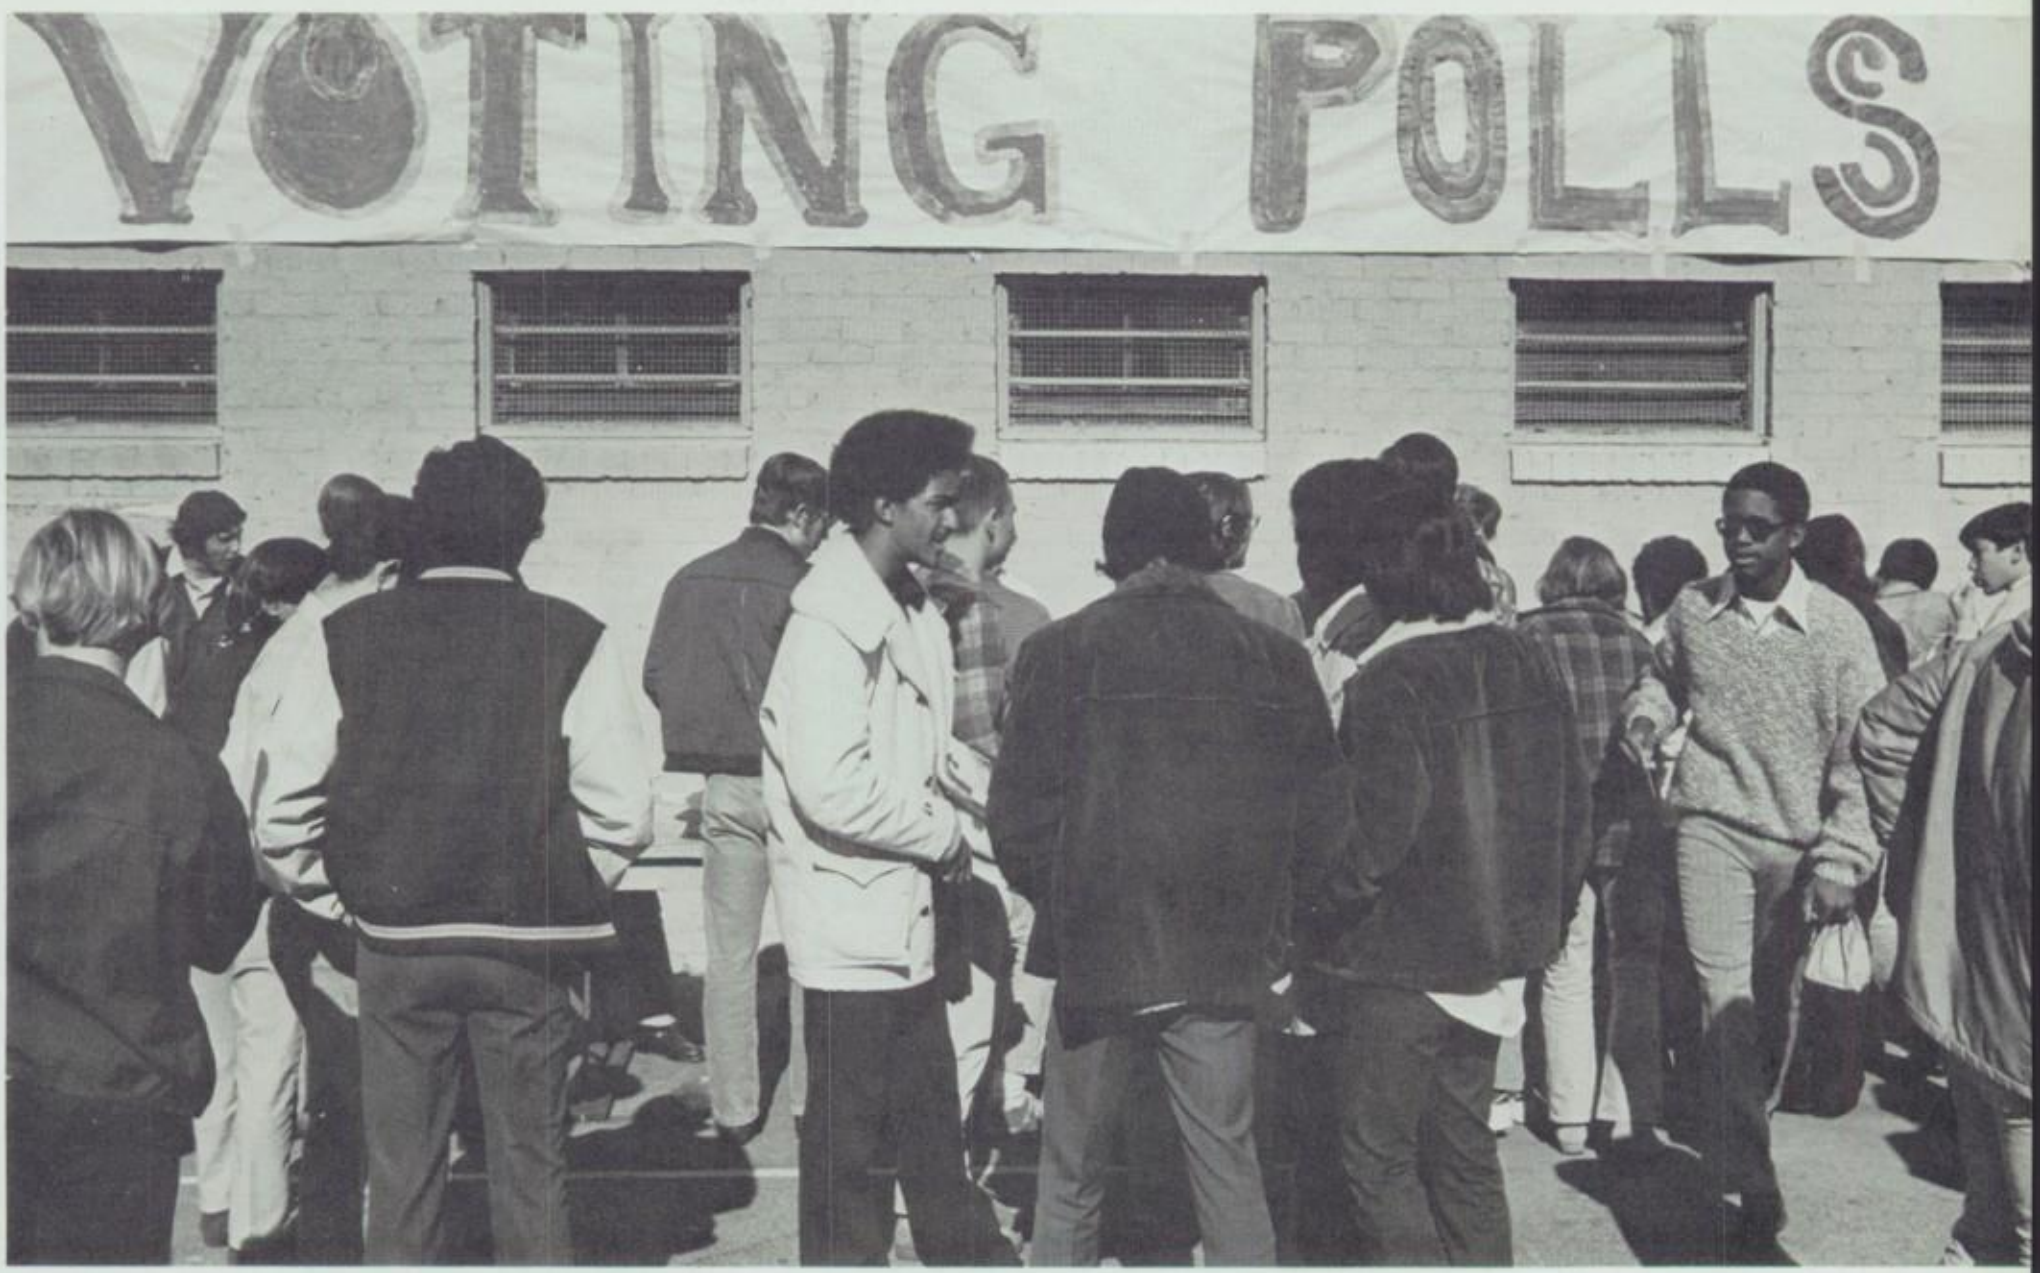
Jerome Jackson



The student council structure, set up by the new constitution, provides the student body with an efficient and effective representative body without the difficulties of a massive government structure. This closely united group, that consists of one soph, two juniors and four seniors, is mutually committed to work for the benefit of the students.

radio

Maurice Bizzari, Mark Andrew, Keith Fuller, and Fr. Koch enjoyed another year of amateur radio. "The radio club was a high mark in my Loyola days." says Mark. "I found it a bit bizarre." says Maurice. "It made my school year fuller." says Keith.

Sixth-eight fuses were blown, and ninety-seven cases of pop were consumed.

The Pep Club has the responsibility of keeping the spirit at Loyola alive. But with the ever progressing move toward individualism here at Loyola and everywhere, the task is not an easy one. Under the direction of Head Cheerleaders Jim Lyons and Odom Williams, the major teams were backed by the student body through victories as well as losses. Rallies and signs were supervised by the club's president, Paul Sofranko, and all the fun was moderated by Mr. Turbay.

Loyola High is supposed to be a Christian school. We teach Christianity in the classrooms, we try to practice Christianity on the campus and off, in our casual relationships with others, and in community work. But there is another aspect to Christianity that we try to highlight with a number of Christian Life Communities. Made up of a faculty member and a group of students, these cells meet regularly to deepen their social, intellectual and sacramental awareness of their commitment to Christianity.

Each cell is different, depending on the people who make each up. Some meet weekly to celebrate Mass together, others regularly express their Christianity in social work, still others meet in the evening to celebrate their Christianity through a meal, a discussion and a Mass. No matter the method used, however, each cell is attempting to deepen the Christian-event in their lives.

From late September to the middle of May, the Loyola High School Speech and Debate Squad made its presence felt throughout Southern California. This year the team was boosted with a wide variety of new members from Logic, Debate, and Argumentation class. The activities of the Loyola Chapter of the National Forensic League bring many Loyola Students into contact with students from many of the public and private high schools of California. This year the team was led by President Bill DeKay, Vice President Vince Uzkuraitis, and Secretary Paul Dwan. The faculty moderator this year was Mr. Thomas Weston S.J.

Striving to be a more active club this year, some of the French students chose to go beyond the classroom walls to experience the French way of life. Since Paris wasn't in the budget, it was decided that they would visit the local French atmosphere.

The French cinema was reviewed at a number of subtitled films in town and French cuisine was tasted at a banquet held jointly with girls from St. Mary's. French was no longer merely a language to these students, but another way of expression.

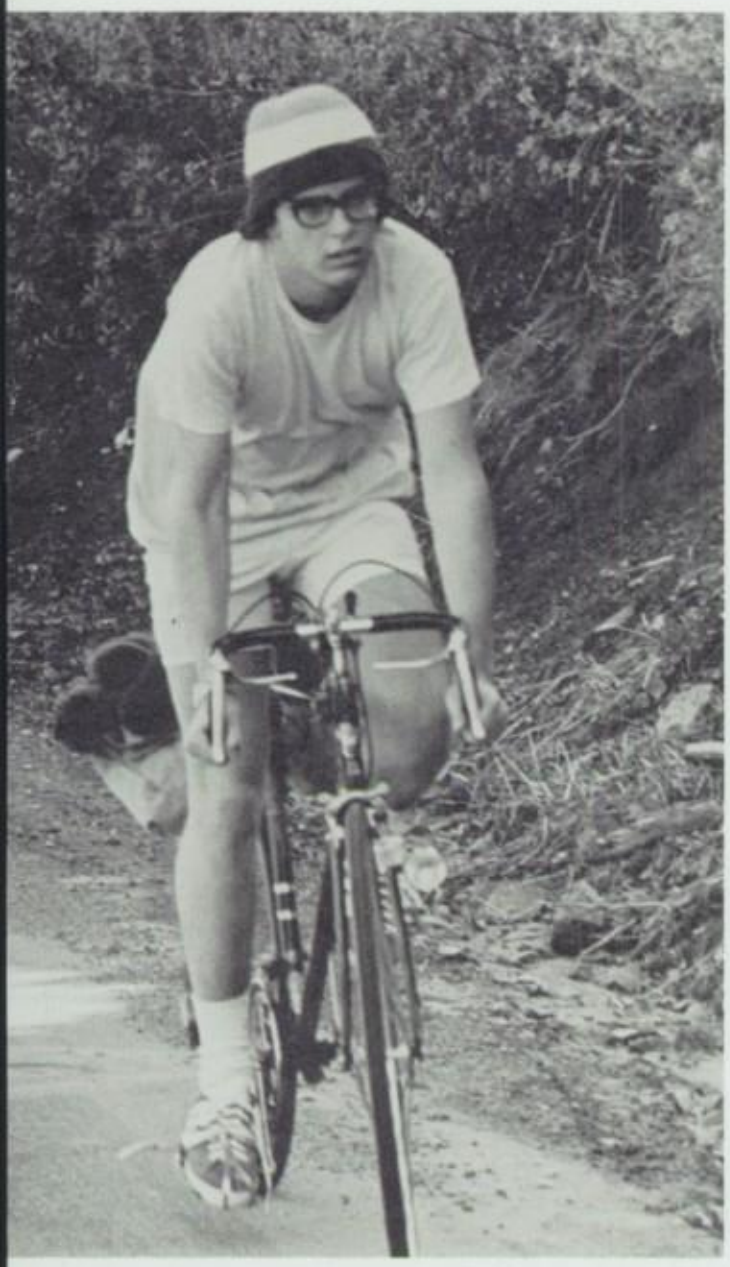
bicycling



Now in its second year, the Bike Club has logged over a thousand miles, and has well explored the Los Angeles area. The club sponsors a number of trips during the school year varying in length from several one day rides to a six day trip to Joshua Tree National Monument. A Summer trip to Oregon is also planned. The club plans to rent a truck, drive up north and spend the entire month of August cycling and hiking in the countryside. The Bicycle Club is moderated by Mr. Bill Johnson and is assisted by Chris Adams.

The Hollywood Hills, Vasquez Rocks, Bouquet Canyon and Mount Lowe comprised the list of sites covered by the neophyte mountaineers in the opening months. Joshua Tree Park (now Saddleback Butte) was the choice for an overnight outing near Mid-Term.

The Sierras and surrounding areas beckoned in the spring to our seasoned hikers.

This year's dance committee, under the leadership of Social Coordinator, Joe McRoskey, and co-chairman, Paul Sofranko, planned and executed one success after another.

With such groups as Sweathog, Rain Forest and finally the incomparable Batdorf and Rodney, everyone agreed that this was one of the best musical seasons at Loyola.

The members of the class of 1976 have proved to be aspiring journalists with the successful publication of their newspaper, the Spirit of '76. The paper is published bi-monthly and sold for a small profit that supplements the freshman treasury. The paper has survived despite many problems with bad typists and lazy writers. However, the staff has pushed and made the Spirit of '76 the only class newspaper at Loyola. About twenty-five freshmen work on the paper, which will hopefully be continued next year.

One thing is for sure: Loyola's freshmen well deserve congratulations on a freshman newspaper that has served and succeeded.

The Spring Festival is, except when it isn't, which is most of the time. The Festival concerns itself not only with art of many media (painting, sculpture, photography, drama, film and basic Terrence Koch), but also inventing a gallery for display of that art that is in itself a creation. The festival comes off (if it does) during early May accompanied by the traditional exercise of missing all the class time possible.

In early spring, when upperclassmen began to expect Fr. Cahalan's yearly announcement that the raffle was to get under way, news began to spread that an auction would take its place.

Planned a year in advance, the target date of March 24th finally arrived and "Interchange '73" became a reality and Loyola's first auction. Before the last gavel fell at the wee hour of two a.m., over $95,000 was realized. Auctioneer Robert Abell stimulated the more than four hundred guests into bidding record prices for items ranging from trips to Hawaii and Mexico to a chance to become Principal of Loyola for a day.

The majority of secondary schools do not have a literary magazine. Neither does Loyola, almost. The publication christened "Windowpanes," is published allegedly in March. It is a forum for student created short story, art, poetry, essay, photography, et al. This year teachers also contributed. The majority of the actual work is done by the Grace of God; the remainder by the staff.

Moderator Cameron Campbell, S.J., Editors Steve Shipman and Steve Gavin, along with the remaining Loyolaist staff, have published the Loyalist this year for two basic reasons. First, that they hopefully have conveyed the philosophy of Loyola High by means of the printed word, and second that they have aroused and attracted student interest concerning the social and educational atmosphere not only of Loyola, but also of our surrounding communities. If they have accomplished this, their year has been a successful one.

Mr. Cameron Campbell
Advisor

If there's anyone who knows Loyola visually, it's Mike Hollingsworth. Coming here as a freshman with his Nikon in hand, he joined the yearbook staff and has photographed for the el camino ever since. Being editor this year, he has come in contact with every activity represented here, and more. With the help of photographers Rick Gough and Mike Stathatos, artist Drew Steele and apprentice Mark Carmody, he did his best to be able to hand someone this book and say "This is Loyola 1973."

The 1973 el camino staff would like to thank the following, for without them, this book would never have come about:

Dr. and Mrs. M.C. Hollingsworth
Mrs. Linda Bernatz
Marvin Rand
Steve Hollingsworth
Milt Zolotow
Devaney Murata
Mr. Walters
Fr. Wade
